“Cultivating an Inclusive Climate: Building Campus -Wide Partnerships”

All student affairs practitioners can agree that student success depends on the university commitment to creating innovative organizational structures, policies, programs, and practices that contribute to the development of an inclusive and engaging student and campus culture. As student affairs practitioners, we often find ourselves asking, “Whose job is it anyway to make our campuses welcoming and inclusive?”

Exploring diversity and ways to cultivate an inclusive campus climate has powerful implications for student affairs practitioners. Understanding diversity models and how to manage crisis affecting diverse populations is an important first step toward engaging diverse and inclusive learning communities. The Diversity pre-conference program is designed to engage a dialogue on best practices and models to effect change on college and university campuses and beyond.

Who is the target audience for the Diversity Pre-Conference?

- Multicultural and Diversity Practitioners
- Administrators with interests in diversity and cross-campus collaboration
- Mid-level professionals looking for diversity-focused career advancement paths
- Graduate students and young professionals interested in careers in diversity and inclusion
